

Joint Doctoral Program for Sustainability Research

Overview

The Joint Doctoral Program for Sustainability Research launched in April 2019 is an integrated program jointly offered by the Tokyo University of Agriculture and Technology (TUAT), the University of Electro-Communications (UEC), and TUFS.

About the Program

This program was established based on the thinking that working towards a resolution for current global issues — particularly related to development, environment, and peace — is the duty and purpose of sustainability research.

This joint program leverages the strengths of the three universities — education and research in “liberal arts, area studies, and social science” (TUFS), “food, energy, and life sciences” (TUAT), and “information and communication technology, and artificial intelligence and robotics” (UEC) — to focus on them as practical issues from a humanities and sciences perspective and engage in research that seeks effective resolutions.
